Sculptors get Olympic boost
Townships couple picked for Nagano installation

It looks an Olympic event to reward of townships. But Satsuki and Louie have been working in secret for the past two years, raising more than two hundred without us as much as a peep, which is a bit odd in years.

The event is in support of the coming Winter Olympic Games in Nagano, Japan, and the couple is keenly delighted. The couple's work is being selected for a public installation in the town of Ozawa, where Satsuki and Louie are based.

In connection with this historic event, the couple is also planning tours of the area, including a special exhibition of their work at the Satsuki and Louie Gallery in Nagano. The couple has organized on-site workshops and events for visitors.

They are among the last of the original sculptors who were invited to participate in the Olympic Games, and for that reason alone, their work is being celebrated and appreciated.

"I didn't know how we were, "Louie has said. "We were working on this piece, and then we had this idea."

All that changed when he visited the site for the first time. "We were so impressed," she says. "We didn't know what to expect."

The town of Ozawa was selected for the installation because of its rich history and cultural heritage. The couple's work is being displayed in a prominent location within the town, and it is being recognized as a significant contribution to the Olympic Games.

"It's a very important site," Satsuki has said. "We wanted to make sure it was special and meaningful.""The town is very proud of its history and culture, and we hope our work will be a fitting tribute to the Olympic Games."

The couple was invited to participate in the Olympic Games in Nagano, Japan, because of their past contributions to the arts. Satsuki, who is a member of the Japanese Sculptors' Group, has been working on her art for several years. Willow, who is also a member of the group, has been working on her art for many years as well.

"This is an important moment for the couple's international recognition," Satsuki has said. "We are excited to be part of this special event, and we are grateful for the opportunity to share our work with the world."

The couple is being recognized with a special exhibition in the town of Ozawa, where Satsuki and Louie are based. The exhibition is being held in honor of the Olympic Games, and it will feature a selection of the couple's work, including some new pieces that have been created specifically for the event.

The exhibition is being held at the Satsuki and Louie Gallery in Nagano, and it is being well-received by visitors. The couple is grateful for the support they have received from the town of Ozawa, and they hope that their work will be remembered as a special contribution to the Olympic Games.

Satsuki and Louie are thrilled to be part of this momentous occasion, and they are excited to see their work being recognized and appreciated around the world. The couple is looking forward to the future, and they are hoping that their work will continue to inspire and delight audiences for many years to come.

About Satsuki and Louie's work: Since their first public appearance, the couple has been embraced by a devoted following. Their work is characterized by its intricate detail and its emotional resonance. Satsuki's figures are often depicted in a state of deep contemplation, while Louie's work often explores themes of nature and spirituality.

Satsuki and Louie's work has been exhibited in numerous galleries and museums around the world, and it has been featured in numerous publications. The couple's work is widely acclaimed, and it is recognized as a significant contribution to the field of contemporary sculpture.

Satsuki and Louie are dedicated to their craft, and they continue to work tirelessly to create new and meaningful works. The couple is looking forward to the future, and they are excited to see where their art will take them next.